DAVID AUSTIN/ENGLISH ROSES

For anyone unfamiliar with the term 'English Rose' this is the name David Austin gave to a new bred of roses originating in the hybridisation of Old roses from 18th and 19th centuries (the Gallicas, Damasks, Portland and Bourbon Roses) with present day roses (the hybrid teas and floribundas). English Roses have the following characteristics: they combine the form of the flower, the fragrance and general character of an Old Rose with wide range of colour and the repeat flowering- or 'remontancy' - of a modern Hybrid Tea or Floribunda Rose; they also retain much of the bushy, shrubby growth of the old varieties.
